

Supporting Letter for Professor Sheng Wang, Nominee for IEA Fellow

2015/4/28

Dear IEA committee,

This is a letter in support of Professor Sheng Wang, being nominated for IEA Fellow. Professor Sheng Wang is a highly renowned professor in the School of Public Health, Peking University, China. He has published more than two hundred scientific papers in major journals of public and occupational health. He has authored several books with significant contributions to the Chinese and International Occupational health community. In addition, his services to the academic publication as editors and editors in chief are continuous and countless. His academic contribution to the occupational health and ergonomics science is truly of great significance.

In addition to his significant contribution to science, professor Sheng Wang has achieved so much by contributing his time, effort, and work to organizing societies, conferences, and many other types of activities that have profound impacts on ergonomics and occupational communities. Out of the numerous conferences he has contributed, the successful IEA congress in 2009 held in Beijing and chaired by him has been particularly important and memorable to many people in Asia like me.

Currently I am working with professor Sheng Wang in Chinese Association of Ergonomics Societies (CAES). This is a regional association to link together ergonomics societies and is one of the first kind in Asia. Under the leadership of professor Sheng Wang, we wish to make further contribution by enabling more activities and communications in Asia. I am honored to be able to work together with professor Sheng Wang to serve the member societies of CAES. Learning that he is being nominated by CES, I am very pleased to write this letter in strong support of him for the IEA fellow.

Sincerely yours,

Chiuhsiang Joe Lin, Ph.D. (cjoelin@mail.ntust.edu.tw)
