

A special conference experience on the working world of tomorrow

What does the transformation of work mean for people?
How can companies best prepare their employees? And how is each European country reacting to the process of change?

On 21 and 22 October, the European conference on labour research beyondwork2020 will be discussing and answering questions such as these in the World Conference Center Bonn.

Representatives from European politics, research and business as well as the social partners will have the opportunity to exchange ideas, network and learn from one another. Diverse formats will ensure variety over the course of two intense conference days. In a forum, research projects and funding programmes will be presented; co-working spaces will be available for individual use or team meetings – and an inspirational frame programme will turn beyondwork2020 into a unique conference experience.

Be a part of it, get involved and have your say!

What is it about?

beyondwork2020 will focus on interactive sessions on different session themes.

These will be accompanied by keynotes from internationally renowned experts and a podium discussion led by prominent figures.

In the spacious forum, you will discover future-oriented projects and exciting exhibits, and experience the working world of tomorrow in an open and lively atmosphere. Further formats such as itches about selected research projects of the Federal Ministry of Education and Research will complement the forum.

Together with all other participants, you will be able to gather information regarding the frameworks of the new working world, become familiar with national and international perspectives on the structure of the work of tomorrow, and identify European needs for future research.
